Distribution and characteristics of oxidative and antioxidant enzyme systems in the pulmonary tissues of adult and fetal rats. Distribution and characteristics of oxidative and antioxidant enzyme systems in the pulmonary tissues of adult and fetal rats were studied. Adult rats were killed with a lethal dose of ether, and fetal rats were killed on the 17th, 19th and 21st day of gestation. Activities of superoxide dismutase (SOD) and glutathione peroxidase (GPX) were significantly higher in the adult than in the fetal rats, and catalase (CAT) activity was significantly higher in the fetal rats than in the adult rats. The total content of reduced glutathione was significantly lower in the adult than in the fetal rats. Cytochrome c oxidase activity was significantly higher in the fetal than in the adult rats. Mitochondrial Mn-SOD activity was significantly higher in the fetal than in the adult rats. The content of ascorbic acid was significantly lower in the adult than in the fetal rats. Oxidative stress was higher in the adult than in the fetal rats. There was a significant correlation between Mn-SOD and CAT activity in the adult rats.¹⁸ Copyright 2013 KLab Inc.
